Modern humans are becoming aware that forms of energy such as oil, coal, and natural gas do not exist in unlimited supplies and could dwindle down to nothing in the near future. In addition, they are difficult to obtain, they pollute the atmosphere, and the cost of refining and transporting them is immense. Thus humankind must find new sources of energy. One alternative source, already being used today on a small scale but having great potential for the future, is solar energy. The attractions of solar energy are many. It is free for the taking and will not run out for billions of years. It doesn't pollute or otherwise damage the environment. It creates no dangerous waste products. Finally, the technology needed to obtain energy from sunshine, while still not perfected, is much less complex than that needed to produce nuclear energy. Now you can do your part and contribute to a cleaner, better world by heating your home with solar energy. I will now show you how our solar panels, which are on sale today, are used to heat your water and home efficiently and inexpensively.

- C 27. What is the purpose of the talk?
- (A) To educate the audience on the energy problems of the world.
(B) To present the advantages and disadvantages of using coal and oil.
(C) To persuade the audience to buy solar panels.
(D) To argue against using energy in any form.
- D 28. Who is the speaker?
- (A) A scientist.
(B) A journalist.
(C) An engineer.
(D) A sales person.
- B 29. According to the talk, why do humans need to find new forms of energy?
- (A) Because our technology is limited.
(B) Because many of our present sources will run out someday.
(C) Because using energy from the sun is a very complex process.
(D) Because, so far, humans have been successful in finding sources of energy.
- C 30. What can be inferred from this lecture?
- (A) Coal and oil are cleaner forms of energy than nuclear energy.
(B) Solar energy has been used extensively in the past few years.
(C) Solar energy has many advantages over coal, oil, and nuclear energy.
(D) Humans don't have to worry about finding new energy sources for thousands of years.
